

Li Haiyan, Counselor for Economic Affairs, is the top economic and trade official at the Embassy of the People's Republic of China in Washington, DC, where he also holds the energy and climate change portfolio. Mr. Li serves as chief representative in the U.S. of China's influential National Development and Reform Commission (NDRC), which develops and implements economic, industrial and energy policy and reviews and approves major energy and infrastructure projects. Before his Embassy posting, Mr. Li was Deputy Director of the NDRC's Economic Reform Department, and he previously held several other positions in the Chinese government dealing with economic reform, foreign investment and international cooperation. A graduate of Renmin University of China in Beijing , formerly People's University, he is an economist and was a visiting scholar at the University of Michigan in 1984.